Chardin and the Still-Life Tradition in France, an exhibition produced by The Cleveland Museum of Art's Department of Art History and Education will supplement the Chardin exhibition during its Cleveland showing. Thirty-five works by Chardin's predecessors and contemporaries and nineteenth-century still-life painters will be compared and contrasted with works by Chardin to examine Chardin's role in the evolution of still-life painting. A catalogue written by Dr. Gabriel P. Weisberg, curator of art history and education at The Cleveland Museum of Art, and Dr. William S. Talbot accompanies this exhibition. This exhibition has been funded in part by a grant from the National Endowment for the Arts.
